Every day you listen to the weatherforecast on the radioand TV. But do you know that you can forecast the weather, too? How?

Firstly, watch birds, animals, flowers. They tell you about the weather. For example, birds fly lower than usual before it rains.

Secondly, look at the sky. The colour of the sky, the sun, the moon and the stars can tell you a lot about the weather. «Evening red and morning grey help the traveller on his way. Evening grey and morning red before it rains».

And it is really true. A red sky in the evening means good weather the next day. When the summer stars are clearer than usual, it is also means good weather, but clear stars in winter mean cold weather.

When you see dark clouds in the west, it means rain:«Dark clouds in the west stay indoors and rest». But when there are no clouds in the sky, the night is getting cooler.

-Now lets do the task. True or false?
